

Wheeler's Meriden AIC Program

Founded in 1968, Wheeler provides comprehensive health care to more than 50,000 people each year, in more than 90 percent of the state's cities and towns. Services address behavioral and primary health care, substance abuse, child welfare, special education, prevention and wellness, and community justice. Our integrated approach creates measurable results, positive outcomes, and hopeful tomorrows.

Providing Second Chances: Alternative in the Community

Wheeler operates four Alternative in the Community programs, in Bristol, Meriden, Middletown, and New Britain, for court-involved adults. Our Meriden office serves clients in Meriden and Wallingford, using an evidence-based model to assess individual needs and reduce criminal justice involvement, including work readiness, job placement, social skills / problem solving, substance use intervention, and case management.

Employment Services & Job Development

Employment is crucial to help returning citizens become positive and productive members of our community. As local employers and the heart of our community, Chamber members can offer vital assistance to give people a second chance and change their lives for the better. Here are some ways you can help offer a part-time or full-time position, provide an internship, shadow, or job training opportunity identify volunteer opportunities, like helping sort bulk mail or other tasks.

If you believe in second chances, we would like to hear from you!
